

GXY949 Aquila II

Aquila's' spacious nets and swaying, bouncy destinations attract and cater for playful children meeting and socializing for heaps of children. The rope and net details make various body positions possible, thus catering for many and a wide age span. The bounce and sway Of the activities are fundamental motivation factors for play. The interconnectedness of the nets and play shells means that the children feel the movement of the other children climbing. At the Stabile ends, bouncy smaller group meetings are facilitated. The intense physical feedback of the varied meeting areas support social interaction for big groups. This facilitate the teenagers' social skills and their sense of belonging. The climbing and bouncing in Aquila train their balance, proprioception and spatial awareness intensely. All skills needed for e.g. navigating traffic safely.
