Two tower with plank bridge, wood posts & banister bars

Climbing up, balancing over and sliding or gliding down again are all great eternal attractions for school age children. The child can take the way up to the two platforms via the sturdy steel rung ladder or the climbing pole. From the two platforms the dare devil fireman's pole or Banister Bars are the rewarding ways back to the ground. The two towers are bridged by a wobbly plank bridge that takes a lot of concentration and demands a good sense of balance.
