

The house in the harbour offers shelter and protection. Through peeping holes and windows you can observe the world and yet be hidden from both below and upstairs. The little bench invites neighbours for a chat and on the other side, the ship is ready to sail out into the world. From the look-out post on the balcony you can spot everything from submarines to whales. On ground level there is room for both cabin and kitchen, and in the little space under the climbing wall, everyone can hide from the pirates.
