

NRO404 Village Shop

The village house evokes the play urge in all children with its curved roof, open desks and nice bench inside. The dramatic play scenarios of the house know no limits: there is room for many hours of continued role play that children will return to again and again. The counter will function as shop window as well as bench in the children's dramatic play. The bench inside will stimulate breaks and function as table, too. The romantic village windows function as extra decoration to inspire play. When children do dramatic play they not only train their imagination and empathy. They also play out everyday scenarios that they have a hard time understanding, thus negotiating through their life observations. While doing so, they constantly talk and communicate with their peers, thus hugely stimulating language skills and thinking skills.
