

The Originator, with its many varied levels and play panels, is a huge attraction to toddlers. The variation of play spaces and activities builds layers of play opportunities that make the children want to come back time after time. The wall climbers provide climbing to two levels, presenting varied play challenges and training major muscle groups. From the highest platform, a slide and a curly climber offer varied rides down to ground level. The sliding or gliding and rotating down trains spatial awareness, an important motor skill for judging distances, which is vital in traffic. At ground level, posts define spaces for role play and the sand corner adds creative play. The face panel on an elevated level can be used to express feelings whilst the many meeting points add social interaction to the Originator's benefits.
